What?

VodaFest is the first Czech and Slovak Festival in Melbourne and Victoria. Its first edition attracted over 350 visitors to an exhibition of Czech and Slovak traditions, culture and art, as well as a variety of traditional meals and beverages.

The VodaFest association, when incorporated, is a legal entity able to provide insurance to its members while organizing future community events.

Who?

VodaFest is a group of Czechs, Slovaks and Australians who dedicate their time and effort for the benefit of the communities and multi-cultural society in Australia.

We invite you to become a member of VodaFest if you enjoy all things Czech or Slovak, and are happy to support showcasing of the countries' history, traditions and cuisine.

Why?

The aim of the association is to link Czechs and Slovaks and the communities they live in, by sharing traditions, culture, history and a love of these nations. The association will create a platform for the existing Czech/Slovak associations to participate in festival and mutual social events.

Incorporation of the VodaFest association is an essential step toward proper festival organization, funding opportunities, and protection of members, volunteers and visitors to our events.

How?

We hope to fund the festival primarily through a combination of cultural and multicultural grants from the governments of the Czech Republic, Slovakia and Australia, and sponsorships.

We are planning to run a number of smaller fundraising events throughout the year.

Membership fees are essential to cover ongoing operational costs such as insurance, financial auditing and administration.

Where?

To learn more about VodaFest, visit our website at http://vodafest.org. There, you can subscribe to the regular newsletter and stay updated on latest community news and upcoming events.

Visit our monthly Czech and Slovak Night at Koliba Restaurant or other social events around Melbourne and Victoria.

For direct communication call Lenka at 0418-388-689 or reach us via e-mail at info@vodafest.org.